Subject: NZ Housing

Hi Paula

I read in today's paper that there are over 500 housing NZ homes unavailable because of contamination from meth. If this is true then what a huge waste of taxpayer resources being destroyed by some of the very people that need them the most. What sort of accountability does this sort of thing evoke. I am sure many NZ taxpayers would be appalled at this destruction of public resources and now having to pay to repair these houses as well as for motel rooms and relocation costs to help people out because there is a housing shortage.

What will our country and government do about this?

Cheers
